NOTICE TO CITY SUBSCRIBERS.

The Daily Democrat, delivered by caravans throughout the city, is at the rate of twenty-five cents per week, including the Sunday paper.

Thereafter the Daily, by mail, will be one dollar per month, or six dollars for six months, or ten dollars per year, always in advance.

CITY NEWS.

Adams Press for Sale.

One of the largest sized Adams presses, in complete order, is offered for sale. It is as good as new and will be sold at a bargain, as we have no use for it. Apply at the Democrat office.

OUR AGENTS.—Messrs. Norris & Bro., Lexington, and Mr. J. D. Pollard, Frankfort, are our agents. The Daily Democrat can be had at either of the above news depots every morning.

DR. R. H. Singleton, Nashville, Tenn., has the Louisville Democrat and sells to all at five cents per copy.

Police Proceedings.—Tuesday, Dec. 20.—Oscar Blakely, drunk and disorderly conduct; fined $5.

George W. Hazel, drunk and disorderly conduct; fined $5.

Matilda Saulsbury, drunk and disorderly conduct; discharged.

Elizabeth Parrent, charged with assaulting Ida May, where she fled; discharged.

Mathew Moran and William Ollis, stealing boots from John Christie; Moran discharged; Ollis held in $500 to answer.

Franklin Winters, one of the burglars who entered the store of Jones & Tapp, was tried and held in $1,000 to answer. There are two others who escaped. Justice will overtake them.

Thomas Smith, demanding money from L. Stanbury by menacing with intent to rob; discharged.

SKIRMISH IN COURT.—There was considerable excitement in the Police Court yesterday morning, caused by a slight skirmish between the keeper of the workhouse and two young men. The difficulty originated in the following manner: L. Strasburg, a refugee from East Tennessee, who is employed at one of the workhouses, sent out a warrant against two men for demanding his money with intent to rob. During the investigation of the case Mr. Kirkpatrick made a remark to a friend that any one who would menace an old man like Strasburg was a coward. Two young men, L. Thurman and Andrew Hook, interfered, when a skirmish ensued. The stability of the police was called in, and the young men were sent to jail for contempt of court.

Job Printing.

The Job Department in the Democratic Office is ready for all kinds of printing. Bills, Circulars, Cards, Posters, &c., printed at the shortest possible notice, and at prices to suit the times.

ANOTHER CAUGHT.—On last Wednesday night the clothing store of Jones & Tapp, on Sixth street, was burglariously entered and robbed of a large quantity of clothing. Two parties were arrested at the time and held to answer in $1,000 each for the crime. Yesterday morning officer Henry Green presented Franklin Winters to the Police Court as being concerned in the robbery. He had an examination and was held in $1,000 to answer.

PRISONERS.—A large number of rebel prisoners were sent to Camp Douglass yesterday. They created some curiosity and excitement as they went "marching along" through the city and at the wharf. Rumors were scarce on the streets. The march of a lot of rebel prisoners through the streets created some little curiosity. Military matters were exceedingly dull. Arrests were fewest than usual. All the places of amusement were crowded last night.

Gift Books for the Holidays.—Mr. F. A. Crump, on the west side of Fourth street, near Market, has a large stock of finely illuminated gift books, and the works of all the standard poets, beautifully bound, photograph albums in great variety, and books for the little folks, writing desks, toy books for children, and every thing of use and value usually kept in such establishments. Read advertisement.

Our old friend John Brown's eldest daughter was married yesterday— We hope to say to a very worthy express officer, Mr. Brinkendorfer, and in expressing our best wishes for the future welfare of the happy couple, we will give her friend John Wood's toast: "May prosperity smile upon their future as brightly as the sun shone on their nuptials."

ABOUT three hundred sick and wounded soldiers arrived from Nashville eight before last, and about two hundred and fifty yesterday morning. A large number have been sent North from this city. Another large lot are expected to arrive to-day, if transportation can be furnished at Nashville. All the trains are engaged in transporting rebel prisoners.

FIRE.—A fire broke out yesterday afternoon in a brick tenement on Marshall street, between Hancock and Clay. Both tenements were nearly entirely destroyed. We did not know who they belonged to, nor the loss sustained. The fire originated accidentally. The steam engines were on the ground and rendered efficient service.

TURKEY SHOOTING.—There will be grand sport at the corner of Twenty-first and Broadway to day, when all the good shots should be present. Andy Craig proposes to have another shooting match this afternoon, when he will have on hand a large number of fine turkeys. Christmas is coming—so turn out, boys, and buy a supply of turkeys.

AN OLD lady, who is supposed to be a refugee, came near being frozen to death right before last. She was a stranger in the city and had no shelter but an awning for the night, and no bed but the cold pavement. She is being cared for now.

A home for the orphan refugees has been established on Sixth street, between Main and the river. The poor orphans are well cared for, and good comfortable homes found for them occasionally.

We notice that the locomotives are beginning to run too fast on the First street railroad again. Some one will be run over and killed if they are not watchful.

DEMENTES.—This class of individuals seem to be numerous of late. Yesterday sixteen arrived from Smithfield, three from Lebanon and two from Lexington.

The train from Nashville arrived about one hour behind time yesterday. There was nothing of interest transpiring along the route.

Lecture at the Female High School at 11 o'clock A. M. to day, by Dr. Frazee, of the Kentucky School of Medicine.

W. H. Ehrich has our thanks for full pages of Nashville papers, left in our office in advance of the mail.

A. WARNING.—TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.—For some time past guerrilla parties, who often style themselves Confederate soldiers, have been making raids on railroads, tearing up rails, burning bridges and trains, and worse than all, firing into trains where innocent women and children are liable to be shot and killed at any moment. It is true that trains may be well guarded, but of what use are they when a band of guerrillas tear up a rail, throw a train from the track, endangering the lives of all on board, and the deports far away from the scene? They can only protect the cars from being burned and save the passengers from being robbed. It has grown to be a common occurrence for Bill Magruder with four or five men to attack trains on the Lebanon road, do almost as he pleases, and a more frequent one for Gentry and his gang to commit depredations on the Louisville and Lexington road. When Federal cavalry are sent in pursuit of those men they scatter like sheep, and intrude themselves upon persons who, from fear, are compelled to harbor them in their houses, and are as weak as lambs and innocent as kittens. But no sooner are the pursuers out of hearing than they get together again, and, if anything, are worse than before. We understand that the military authorities are determined to put a stop to this uncivil, unscrupulous practice of endangering the lives of innocent persons on railroad tracks on the Louisville and Lexington and Lebanon roads. If any more rails are torn up or obstructions put upon the track to throw the trains off, if any more cars, freight or passenger, are fired into by guerrillas on either of the above named roads, the nearest relatives and friends of the deponents of such cowardly deeds will be arrested and put into cars in front of all the engines and run up and down the roads until they are satisfied that the road and trains will not be interfered with by guerrillas parties. If Gentry fires into a train it may be his nearest relative and some of his dearest friends who will be made to suffer for his conduct. If Bill Magruder throws another train from the track he will not only endanger the lives of innocent people, but may endanger the lives of those that are nearer and dearer to him. We have heard it intimated that the military authorities will adopt the above measures if it is not stopped.

THE FOLLOWING Confederate soldiers took the oath of allegiance yesterday and were released: Jerome Schurman, co. A, First Missouri Cavalry; Wm. Farron and Frank Philpot, Expert's command, and George J. Weisinger, co. B, Fifteenth Mississippi.

We are indebted to our friend John H. Wilson, messenger on the steamer Tarascon, for his services.

A rebel officer made his escape from the train between this city and Nashville.

The following Kentucky and Indiana soldiers died in the United States hospitals at Nashville during the week ending Dec. 17, 1864:

George Wetherald, K. 46th Ind.

Jess McCline, C. 57th Ind.

John E. Edwards, K. 6th Ind.

REBELS AT HAWESVILLE.—On Wednesday last the steamer Tarascon landed at Hawesville. While lying there a large number of Major Walker Taylor's men were discovered in the town. Quite a number of them went on board the boat, and behaved very gentlemanly to everybody. One of the number was recognized by parties on board as Lew Holmes. Major Taylor and a party of his men, with a flag of truce, crossed over the river to Cannelton on the ferry-boat, but for what purpose was not known. The boat left them there. At Lewisport a large number of Confederates were seen the past passed up. It is said the banks of the river are swarming again with guerrillas.

JOINT PRINTING.—The Job Department in the Democratic Office is ready for all kinds of printing. Bills, Circulars, Cards, Posters, &c., printed at the shortest possible notice, and at prices to suit the times.

HOW'S YE'R MOTHER?

The moon was bright,
One lovely night;
John, through the woods was stealing,
O'er sticks and stones
With Nellie Jones,
From Grimes' apple-peeling.

As they walked,
How sweet he talked;
For he resolved to tell her
How glad he'd be
If only she
Would love no other feller.

But Nellie, shy,
Would smile and sigh,
As they were slowly walking;
Then the world blushed,
And say, "O! how's John?"
John, how you are talking!"

As it grew late
They neared the gate—
Their steps were slow and shorter;

He asked the kiss
Of one sweet kiss,
And said, "Now, Nell, you ougler."

So, Nell, for fun,
Turned to him—
She dodged, and John missed her;

He chased a while,

Till, with a smile,
He caught her, and he kissed her.

She hung her head
And nothing said,

While John was looking at her—
He thought her mad—

(But Nell was glad),

And asked her "wha's the matter?"

Now, by her side,

He sat and cried,

And swears by all the saints—

She did not speak;

He kissed her cheek,

And begged to let him love her.

The tale of old—
To her he told—

How he had known no other;

Nell, he had her,

And sighed, and said—

"SAV, JOHNY, HOW'S YE'R MOTHER?"

WILL S. HAYS.
HERMITAGE, December 14, 1854.

Robin Adair.

Robin Adair, the hero of the song, was known in the London fashionable circles of the last century by the sobriquet of the "Fortunate Irishman," but his parentage and the exact place of his birth are unknown. He was brought up as a surgeon, but "his detection in an early amour drove him precipitately from Dublin," to push his fortunes in England. Scarcey had he crossed the channel when the chain of luck which ultimately led him to fame and fortune, overthrew him.

Near Holyhead, perceiving a carriage overturned, he tendered assistance. The sole occupant of this vehicle was a "lady of fashion, well known in polite circles," who received Adair's attentions with thanks; and, being slightly hurt, and hearing that he was a surgeon, requested him to travel with her in her carriage to London. On their arrival in the metropolis she presented him with a fee of 100 guineas, and gave him a general invitation to her house. In after life Adair used to say that it was not so much the amount of this fee, but of service it was given, that was of service to him, as he was almost destitute. But the invitation to her house met the personal needs of this person, who was lady Caroline, King's daughter of the Duke of Richmond. Forgetting her high lineage, Lady Caroline, at the first sight of the Irish surgeon, fell desperately in love with him; and her emotion was so sudden and so violent as to attract the general attention of the company.

Adair, perceiving his advantage, lost no time in pursuing it, while the Albermarle and Richmond papers were dismayed at the prospect of so terrible a malencontre. Every means were tried to induce the young lady to change her resolution, but Adair's singularities sold us that "amusement, a long journey, an adventurous offer, and other common modes of shaking off what was considered by the family as an improper match, were already tried, but all in vain; the health of Lady Caroline was evidently impaired, and the family at last confessed, with a good sense that reflects honor on their understanding, as well as their hearts, that it was possible to prevent but never to dissolve an attachment; and that marriage was the honorable, and, indeed, the only alternative that could secure her happiness in life."

When lady Caroline was taken by her friends from London to Bath, that she might be separated from her lover, she wrote, it is said, the song of "Robin Adair," and set it to a plaintive Irish song that she had heard him sing. Whether written by Lady Caroline or not, the song is really expressive of her feelings at the time, and it completely corroborates the circumstances just related, which were the town talk of the period, though now little more than family tradition, there can be no doubt that they were the origin of the song, the words of which, as originally written, are the following:

"What's this dull town to me?

Robin's not near;

Wish for to hear.

Where's all the joy and mirth?

Made life a heavy earth!

Oh! they're all fled with thee,

Robin Adair!

What made the assembly shine?

Robin Adair!

What made the hall so gay?

Robin was there!

What, when the play was o'er?

What made my heart so sore?

Oh! it was parting with thee,

Robin Adair!

But now thou art far from me,

Robin Adair!

But now I never see

Robin Adair!

Yet he I love so well,

Still in my heart shall dwell,

Oh! can I never forget

Robin Adair?

Immediately after his marriage with Lady Caroline, Adair was placed in command of military hospitals and subsequently, became a favorite of George III., who was made surgeon general, King's sergeant surgeon, and surgeon of Chelsea Hospital. Very fortunate men seldom have many friends, but Adair, by declining a baronetcy that was offered to him by the King for surgical attendance on the Duke of Gloucester, actually acquired considerable popularity before his death, which took place when he was nearly four score years of age, in 1781, and the general Magistrate, then there, was voted "Our dear dead of Robert Adair, Esq., late Surgeon General, by J. Crane, M. D., who it is to be hoped, was a much better physician than a poet."

Lady Caroline Adair's married life was short but happy. She died of consumption, after giving birth to three children, one of them a son. On her death bed she requested Adair to wear mourning for her as long as he lived, which he scrupulously did, save on the king's and queen's birthdays, when his duty to his sovereign required him to appear in court in full dress. If this injunction concerning mourning were to prevail, Adair married again, he had the desired effect, he did not marry a second time, though he had many offers.

Adair seems to have been a universal favorite among both women and men; even Pope Garganelli conceived a strong friendship for him when he visited Rome. Adair's only son by Lady Keppeil served his country with distinction as a diplomatist, and died in 1855, aged ninety-two years, then being the Right Hon. Sir Robert Adair, G. C. B., the last surviving political and private friend of his distinguished relative, Chas James Fox. His memory, though not generally known, has been also enshrined in a popular piece of poetry, for being especially popular for the diplomatic service of the University. The Rover, as Rogers, rechristened him in "The Rover," and the unfortunate student-lover of "Sweet Matilda Pottington," [New York Albion]

Talking Fine.

Ludicrous blunders sometimes occur in cases where ignorant persons attempt the use of language about the meaning of which they know nothing.

Not long since, while traveling from Pittsburg to Cincinnati, two rather verdant specimens of the female sex came on board the boat, at one of the landings, who, for the sake of distinction, we will call Mary and Jane.

Now, Mary had her eye-teeth cut, or, in other words, was acquainted with the rules and regulations which govern genteel society. Jane, the younger, had never mixed in society to any extent. Her language was such as she had heard among her rustic associates. Mary was aware of this fact, and, therefore, cautioned her to observe how she (Mary) acted, and govern herself accordingly.

Shortly after, while seated at the dinner table, the waiter asked Mary what part of the fowl she would have. She informed him in a very polite manner, that it was "perfectly immaterial." He accordingly gave her a piece, and then inquired of Jane what part she would prefer.

"I believe I'll take a piece of the immortal too!"

The scene that followed this declaration is beyond the power of the pen to describe. The assembled company were compelled to give a spontaneous vent to their surcharged feelings in peals of boisterous laughter, whilst the poor girl, her face suffused with crimson blushes, left the table, declaring, as she fled from the cabin:

"They won't catch me on one of these pesky steamboats again!"
